US Army Corps Of Engineers Holds Engineer Week Open House

Feb. 12, 2003

CHARLESTON, S.C.--- The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Charleston District, is celebrating National Engineer's Week 2003 by hosting an Open House on Friday, Feb. 21 from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the Citadel Alumni Center located at 69 Hagood Ave.

The Charleston District will present several displays that show what the Corps does for the state and the Nation. A highlight of the event will be an interactive physical model that demonstrates what happens in a flood plain area.

Corps employees will be on hand to discuss each of our mission areas, which include -- regulatory and the environment, coastal engineering and flood control, navigation, value engineering, disaster preparedness and response, and planning assistance to states.

National Engineers Week is an annual event to help raise public awareness and appreciation of engineers and their work.

National Engineers Week was founded in 1951 by the National Society of Professional Engineers.

This event is open to the general public.
